

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	1
PART 1 REALITY CHECK: CAN VICTIMS BE PARTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE HARM THEY SUFFER?
1 Victims' Conduct in Criminal Law and Criminology	9
2 Why Does Criminal Law Need a Generic Defense of Comparative Criminal Liability?	36
PART 2 TOWARD A UNIFYING THEORY OF COMPARATIVE CRIMINAL LIABILITY
3 What Happens to Victims' Rights in Situations of Consent, Self-Defense, and Provocation?	61
4 The Principle of Conditionality of Rights	91
PART 3 INCORPORATING THE PRINCIPLE OF CONDITIONALITY OF RIGHTS INTO CRIMINAL LAW
5 How Long Do Victims' Rights Remain Limited?	127
6 The Defense of Comparative Criminal Liability	141

viii CONTENTS

Conclusion	161
Notes	167
Bibliography	213
Index	229