

Acknowledgments

The chapters in this book were originally prepared for and presented as a lecture series at Amherst College during the 2004–2005 academic year. We are grateful to our Amherst College colleagues David Delaney and Nasser Hussain for their enthusiastic and helpful participation in that series. We thank our students in Amherst College's Department of Law, Jurisprudence & Social Thought for their interest in the issues addressed in this book. We are especially grateful for Conor Clarke's invaluable assistance in the preparation of our introductory essay. Finally, we would like to express our appreciation for generous financial support provided by the College's Charles Hamilton Houston Forum on Law and Social Change and to Amherst's Dean of the Faculty, Greg Call, for his interest and support.