

Contributors

Sei Jeong Chin is a Ph.D. candidate in History and East Asian Languages at Harvard University. She is currently writing a dissertation entitled "Negotiating Public Opinion: Law, Politics, and the News Media, 1931–1957." Her research interests concern political history, legal history, and the history of political communication and the news media in Nationalist China and the early PRC. Beginning fall 2007, she will be teaching at the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Parks M. Coble is Professor of East Asian History at the University of Nebraska. His most recent book is Chinese Capitalists in Japan's New Order: The Occupied Lower Yangzi, 1937–1945 (University of California Press, 2003). He is currently working on a research project, "China at War, 1937–1945: Remembering and Re-remembering China's War of Resistance."

Nara Dillon is Assistant Professor of Political Studies and Asian Studies at Bard College. She received her Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, and is now completing a book manuscript entitled, "The Paradox of the Welfare State: The Politics of Privilege in Revolutionary Shanghai."

Bryna Goodman is Professor of History, University of Oregon. She is author of Native Place, City, and Nation: Regional Networks and Identities in Shanghai, 1853–1937 (University of California Press, 1995); editor of Transnationalism and the Chinese Press (special issue, China Review, 2004); and coeditor of Gender in Motion: Divisions of Labor and Cultural Change in Late Imperial and Modern China (Rowman and Littlefield, 2005).

Brian G. Martin is Visiting Fellow of the Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies, Australian National University. He is the author of The Shanghai Green Gang: Politics and Organized Crime, 1919–1937 (University of California Press, 1996). He is currently working on a research project on Zhou Fohai and the politics of collaboration in the Wang Jingwei regime (1940–1945).

Jean C. Oi is William Haas Professor of Chinese Politics, Professor of Political Science, and Director of the China Program at Stanford University. Her most recent books are Rural China Takes Off: Institutional Foundations of Economic Reform (University of California Press, 1999) and, as coeditor with Andrew Walder, Property Rights and Economic Reform in China (Stanford University Press, 1999). She is currently working on corporate restructuring in China's state-owned firms.

Elizabeth J. Perry is Henry Rosovsky Professor of Government at Harvard University. Her most recent books are Patrolling the Revolution: Worker Militias, Citizenship and the Modern Chinese State (Rowman and Littlefield, 2006) and, as coeditor with Merle Goldman, Grassroots Political Reform in Contemporary China (Harvard University Press, 2007). She is currently working on a study of the labor movement at the Anyuan coal mine.

Kuiyi Shen is Associate Professor of Art History at University of California, San Diego. Among previous publications he has authored or coauthored are A Century in Crisis: Tradition and Modernity in the Art of Twentieth Century China (Guggenheim Museum/Abrams, 1998); Between the Thunder and the Rain: Chinese Paintings from the Opium War to the Cultural Revolution (Asian Art Museum of San Francisco, 2000); Word and Meaning (University at Buffalo Art Gallery, 2000); Zhou Brothers (Hatje Cantz, 2004); Shanghai Modern (Hatje Cantz, 2005); and Elegant Gathering (Asian Art Museum of San Francisco, 2006).

Jeffrey N. Wasserstrom is Professor of History at the University of California, Irvine. His books include Student Protests in Twentieth-Century China: The View from Shanghai (Stanford University Press, 1991) and China's Brave New World—And Other Tales for Global Times (Indiana University Press, 2007). He is currently completing work on Global Shanghai, 1850–2010, a study of the city's past and present encounters with international forces to be published by Routledge.

Wen-hsin Yeh is Richard H. and Laurie C. Morrison Professor in History and Director, Institute of East Asian Studies, at the University of California, Berkeley. She is the author, most recently, of Shanghai Splendor: Economic Sentiments and the Making of Modern China, 1843–1945 (University of California Press, 2007) and the editor of several volumes, including Becoming Chinese: Passages to Modernity and Beyond, 1900–1950 (University of California Press, 2000).