
The Authors

Editors

ANNE L. CLUNAN is Assistant Professor of National Security Affairs at the Naval Postgraduate School. She specializes in the state responses to non-traditional security threats in the information age. Her most recent work has appeared in Terrorism Financing and State Responses, Global Politics of Defense Reform, and the journal Political Science Quarterly.

PETER R. LAVOY is National Intelligence Officer for South Asia at the National Intelligence Council. He previously directed the Center for Contemporary Conflict and taught in the National Security Affairs Department at the Naval Postgraduate School. He served as director for Counterproliferation Policy in the Office of the U.S. Secretary of Defense from 1998 through 2000.

SUSAN B. MARTIN is Lecturer at the Department of War Studies, King's College London. She is a founding member of CAMOS, the Committee for the Analysis of Military Operations and Strategy. Her current research focuses on chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons and her work has appeared in the Journal of Strategic Studies and International Security.

Contributors

GARY ACKERMAN is Research Director of the National Consortium for the Study of Terrorism and the Responses to Terrorism (NC-START), a Department of Homeland Security National Center of Excellence, based at the University of Maryland. He is also Director of the Center for Terrorism Intelligence Studies, a division of the Akribis Group.

VICTOR ASAL is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University at Albany—SUNY. His research focuses on the interaction of international relations and domestic politics, notably how this interaction influences ethnic conflict and ethnic terrorism.

RON BARRETT is Assistant Professor of Medical Anthropological and Nursing at Emory University. His research interests concern the social dynamics of infectious diseases and medical decision making in India and the United States.

LEONARD A. COLE is an adjunct professor of political science at Rutgers University, Newark, New Jersey, where he teaches science and public policy. He is the author of seven books including The Anthrax Letters: A Medical Detective Story (2003) and Terror: How Israel Has Coped and What America Can Learn (2007).

JEANNE GUILLEMIN is a Senior Advisor at the MIT Security Studies Program and also a Senior Fellow at the Carr Center for Human Rights Policy at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government. She is the author of Biological Weapons: From the Invention of State Programs to Contemporary Bioterrorism (Columbia University Press, 2005).

ELISA D. HARRIS is a Senior Research Scholar at the Center for International and Security Studies at the University of Maryland (CISSM). From 1993 to 2001, she was Director for Nonproliferation and Export Controls on the National Security Council staff, where she had primary responsibility for coordinating U.S. policy on chemical, biological, and missile proliferation issues.

REBECCA KATZ is an Assistant Research Professor at the George Washington University School of Public Health and Health Services. She is also an expert consultant to the Office of Biological Weapons Affairs in the Bureau of Verification, Compliance, and Implementation, U.S. Department of State. Her current research focuses on global governance in public health.

MILTON LEITENBERG is Senior Research Scholar at the Center for International and Security Studies (CISSM) at the University of Maryland. He has written extensively on biological weapons and arms control, and has authored or edited a half dozen books, an equal number of commissioned book-length studies, and has written some 170 papers, monographs, and book chapters.

MATTHEW S. MESELSON is the Thomas Dudley Cabot Professor of the Natural Sciences in the Department of Molecular and Cellular Biology at Harvard University. His current research is in the field of molecular genetics and evolution. Dr. Meselson presently serves on the Committee on International Security and Arms Control of the National Academy of Sciences.

GRAHAM S. PEARSON is Visiting Professor in International Security in the Department of Peace Studies at the University of Bradford, Bradford, West Yorkshire, UK, where he is active particularly in the area of biological and chemical weapons arms control. He is author of The UNSCOM Saga and The Search for Iraq's Weapons of Mass Destruction. He was Director General and Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down, Salisbury, UK, from 1984 to 1995.

JULIAN PERRY ROBINSON, a chemist and lawyer by training, is a professorial fellow of SPRU—Science & Technology Policy Research, University of Sussex, UK, where he conducts research in the fields of arms control and technology policy with a focus on problems associated with chemical and biological warfare. This is a subject on which he has published or presented some 450 papers and monographs since 1967.

JONATHAN B. TUCKER is a Senior Fellow in the Washington, DC, office of the James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies (CNS) of the Monterey Institute of International Studies, where he specializes in the nonproliferation and control of biological and chemical weapons. Dr. Tucker was an arms control specialist with the U.S. government, including positions at the Department of State, the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment, and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

RAYMOND A. ZILINSKAS is Director of the Chemical and Biological Weapons Nonproliferation Program at the James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies at the Monterey Institute for International Studies. He is the editor of Biological Warfare: Modern Offense and Defense, and co-editor of the Encyclopedia of Bioterrorism Defense.