

Contents

Acknowledgments vii

Introduction 1

The Prose of the World, 1 The Werther Complex, 3
Literature, Exemplarity, and Mediocrity, 7 From Bourgeois
Tragedy to Realism, 11

1. Exemplarity and Mediocrity 15

Exorbitant or Not at All, 15 Living the “Mean” Life (Aristotle), 19
The Rule of Mediocrity (Horace), 21 Exemplary Originality (Kant), 28
Exemplary Averageness (Kant/Schiller), 33 Higher Criticism:
Appreciating Mediocrity (Kleist), 39

2. The Average Audience (Lessing on Bourgeois Tragedy) 42

How to Avoid a Tragic Fate, 42 Middle Heroes, 48 The Great Commonizer: Compassion, 54 Art Without Admiration, or, the End of the Age of Great Men, 58 How Many Tears Should the “Best Human” Shed?, 62 The Politics of Compassion, 68
Paving the Way for Mediocre Minds, 70 When Applause Becomes Suspicious, 72

3. The Average Artist (Goethe and Schiller on Dilettantism) 76

The Stamp of the Dilettante, 76 The Age of Dilettantism, 81
The Imitation Drive, 85 “Much I have tried . . . and neither learned nor achieve anything” (Goethe), 91 The Problem of Popularity, 94
Art School for Nonartists, 102 The Art of Renunciation, 106
The Eternal Return of the Dilettante, 113

4. Average Life (Grillparzer, Stifter, and the Art of Prosaic Reality)	120
The Museum of Spirit, 120	Lives of the Nonfamous (Grillparzer), 128
The Insight of the Obscure, 132	The Sublimity of Regularity (Stifter), 139
Perceptions of the Unperceivable, 144	The Statistical Law, 146
How Gentle Is the Gentle Law?, 149	The Art of Prosaic Reality, 154
Conclusion	163
Notes	175
Bibliography	211
Index	223