

Acknowledgments

This book, published in French in 1998, was written during the years I spent in the department of philosophy of the Marc Bloch University in Strasbourg. The open-mindedness and intellectual rigor that have distinguished the atmosphere of the department have played a very important role in the writing of this book; I would like to thank its directors, Philippe Lacoue-Labarthe and Jean-Luc Nancy.

This book is deeply indebted to Denis Guénoun, Eric Michaud, and Claire Nancy, whose conversation has been a constant in my intellectual and personal life.

I would also like to express my gratitude to Alisa Hartz for her invaluable assistance in the long process of correcting the English translation of this book. The University of Chicago Press graciously provided us with an advance copy of the new English translation of Derrida's Problem of Genesis in Husserl's Philosophy, which was of great help.

I wish to pay homage to the extraordinary intellectual and human generosity of Jacques Derrida. Everything he has given us to think has been, and will remain, invaluable, not least in our quest for hope and our "pursuit of happiness."

Finally, thanks to my parents for their warmth and affection; and to Hent, for all that we have shared for so long now.
