

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	I
Zones of Contact: Literature, Film and the Secret Police, I Reading a Secret Police File, II "Police Aesthetics," 20 The Road Plan, 24
1 Arresting Biographies: The Personal File in the Soviet Union and Romania	27
Preamble: Fragmentary Archives, 27 A Short Genealogy of the Secret Police File, 32 Surveillance Files: Characterization Through Collation, 34 Investigation Files: From Autobiography to Confession, 39 Stalinist Files: How Many of Those Enemies Were Forged, 41 Post-Stalinist Files: The Age of Surveillance, 46 A Note on Foucault, 53
2 The Master and Margarita : The Devil's Secret Police File	55
The Distinguishing Characteristics of the Devil in 1930s Moscow, 56 Writer Prototypes: Madmen, Apostles, and Secret Police Investigators, 59 Censorship and the Authority of the Word, 63 Stalinist "Fantastic Reality" and Its Textual Practices, 68 Mikhail Bulgakov's Personal File, 69 Repetitions with Suspect Differences: The Writer as Copyist, 72
3 Early Soviet Cinema's Shots at Policing	77
Filmmaking and Fingerprinting: Dziga Vertov's Film Theory and Practice, 78 Hidden and Artfully Exhibited Cameras, 85 The Original Show Trial Film and Its Audience, 88 Alexander Medvedkin: Cinema as Public Prosecutor, 92 The Indistinguishable Crowd: Criminal Challenges to Vision and Visual Technologies, 99 The Forged Party Card : Detaching Photographs, Names, and Identities, 103 Vigilance: The Look of High Stalinism, 108 Legitimizing Cinematic Vision: Socialist Realism, Depth Style and The Party Card , 110 Stalin as Scriptwriter and His

	           Chekist Protagonist, 114    Melodrama and the Police, 115    Vision, Visual Technologies, and Policing, 118    The Many Ways Film Directors Took Shots at Policing, 121
4	           Secret Police Shots at Filmmaking: The Gulag and Cinema            The Camp as Soviet Exotica: Solovki, 124    An OGPU Blockbuster: Road to Life, 135    Discipline, Punishment, and a New OGPU Experiment, 137    Film Techniques and Secret Police Tactics, 140    Violence and Stylistic Innovation, 144    Interpellating a Dubious Public: The Belomor Project, 147    Multimedia Portraits of the Camp Inmate, 152    Belomor's Femininity: The Prostitute and the Shock Worker, 153    The Place of the Arts in the Belomor Project, 157         	123
5	           Literary Theory and the Secret Police: Writing and Estranging the Self            Two Masters of Estrangement: Lev Tolstoy and Ivan the Terrible, 163    Revolutionary Estrangement and the Explosion of the Self, 165    Self-Estrangement and Self-Effacement, 167    Deposition and Autobiography: An Estranging Encounter, 169    "This is surrealism": Estrangement in the Interrogation Room, 173    Eulogy to the Lie: Self-Estrangement and Reeducation, 181         	161
	           Concluding Thoughts         	187
	 Notes 	199
	 Index 	239