

Notes on Contributors

ANDREW M. DORMAN IS A SENIOR LECTURER IN THE Defence Studies, King's College London based at the United Kingdom's Joint Services Command and Staff College and an Associate Research Fellow at the Royal Institute of International Affairs (Chatham House). He is a member of the Governing Councils for the International Security Studies Section of ISA and the International Security and Arms Control Section of APSA as well as founding chair of the Kenneth N. Waltz Dissertation Prize and the British Representative on NATO's Human and Societal Dynamics Panel. His primary research interests relate to policy and decision-making focusing on British defense and security policy, European security, defense transformation and civil-military relations. His most recent books are Blair's Successful War (Ashgate, 2009) and War and Diplomacy (Potomac Books, 2008). A former chartered accountant with KPMG, Dr. Dorman has previously taught at the University of Birmingham, where he completed his master's and doctoral degrees, and the Royal Naval College Greenwich.

JOYCE P. KAUFMAN is Professor of Political Science and Director of the Whittier Scholars Program at Whittier College. Since joining the academic world, Dr. Kaufman has taught primarily in the areas of International Relations and American Foreign Policy. Her primary research interests deal with national and international security. Her recent books on the topic are Women and War: Gender Identity and Activism in Times of Conflict (with Kristen P. Williams) (Kumarian Press, 2010) and Women, the State and War: A Comparative Per- spective on Citizenship and Nationalism (with Kristen P. Williams) (Lexington Books, 2007). She also writes on other aspects of international security including the conflicts in the former Yugoslavia and their impact on NATO in the post Cold War world, for which she was awarded a NATO Research Fellowship. Her book NATO and the Former Yugoslavia: Crisis, Conflict and the Atlantic Alliance was published by Rowman & Littlefield Publishers in 2002. Her textbook on American foreign policy, titled A Concise History of American Foreign Policy, was published in August 2006, with a second edition published in 2010. Professor Kaufman received her Ph.D. from the University of Maryland (College Park), and her B.A. and M.A. from New York University.

TRACEY C. GERMAN is a Senior Lecturer in Defence Studies at the Joint Services Command and Staff College, King's College London. Her research interests include security in the Caucasus region, the impact of the Chechen conflict and energy security in the former Soviet states. Recent publications include Russia's Chechen War (Routledge, 2003) and the co-authored Securing Europe: Western Interventions Towards a New Security Community (I. B. Tauris, 2009), as well as articles in journals such as European Security, Small Wars and Insurgencies, Central Asian Survey, Vestnik analitiki and Politique étrangère.

ALEX MARSHALL is a Lecturer at the Scottish Centre for War Studies at Glasgow University and was formerly a lecturer at the Defence Studies Department, King's College London. His publications include the monograph The Russian General Staff and Asia, 1800–1917 and a variety of articles on subjects ranging from Russian military intelligence in World War I to the Soviet withdrawal strategy from Afghanistan in 1987–89. He is currently completing a monograph on the history of the Soviet Caucasus, studying counter-insurgency and state building strategies there and completing a co-authored work provisionally titled Afghanistan: Ten Years of Intervention.

GALE A. MATTOX is a Professor in the Political Science Department, U.S. Naval Academy, where she has served as department chair and chair of chairs. She was awarded the Distinguished Fulbright-Dow Research Chair at the Roosevelt Center, the Netherlands, in 2009, and she has also been Visiting Senior Scholar and Director, Foreign and Domestic Policy Programs, American Institute for Contemporary German Studies, Johns Hopkins University, and Adjunct Professor, Georgetown University. She served on the DOS Policy Planning Staff as well as the Office of Strategic and Theater Nuclear Policy (latter CFR Fellow) and was an International Affairs Analyst at the Congressional Research Service. She has been a Bosch Fellow/Germany, a NATO Research Fellow and a Fulbright Scholar. She served as President (1996–2003) and Vice President of Women in International Security at Georgetown and as Vice President of the ISA. She is on the boards of the Center for Naval Analysis, the Marshall Center (Germany) and the Forum for Security Studies, Swedish National Defense University. She has published widely, including Enlarging NATO: The National Debates (with A. Rachwald).

BILL PARK is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Defence Studies, King's College London. He has written journal articles, book chapters, and monographs on a range of Turkish foreign policy issues, including Turkey's EU accession prospects, Turkey and ESDE, its policies towards Northern Iraq, Turkey-U.S. relations, the Fethullah Gulen movement, and the Ergenekon affair. He is currently writing a book for Routledge on Turkish foreign policy and globalization and is putting together an edited volume for Stanford University Press on Turkey as a regional power under the AKP government. He has appeared as a Turkey expert on various media in the United Kingdom, Turkey and Australia, and is occasionally used as a consultant on Turkish issues by various UK government agencies.

DAVID RUDD is a strategic analyst with the Department of National Defence (DND) in Ottawa. He is currently the resident analyst at the Canadian Forces' Operational Support Command (CANOSCOM), where he studies the implications of NATO and Canadian military transformation for operational support. Prior to joining DND, he served as executive director and later president of the Canadian Institute of Strategic Studies (now known as the Canadian International Council), where he was responsible for research programs and media relations. A regular analyst on radio and television news, he has authored numerous articles for major Canadian newspapers and international publications. Mr. Rudd holds an M.A. degree in international relations from Dalhousie University and a B.A. in political science from the University of Manitoba.

DEBORAH SANDERS is a Senior Lecturer at the Defence Studies Department, King's College London (located at the Defence Academy of the UK), where she specializes in Ukrainian politics, in particular security sector reform and military transformation. She regularly visits Ukraine and is currently doing research on Ukraine's contribution to security in the Black Sea. Her most recent articles include "Ukraine's Military Reform: Building a Paradigm Army,"

Journal of Slavic Military Studies vol. 21, no. 4 (2008); and “Can Ukraine Create an Effective Navy to Protect Its Interests in the Black Sea?,” European Security vol. 16, no. 2 (2007).

SERENA SIMONI is a Lecturer in International Relations in the Department of Political Science at California State University Long Beach (CSULB), where she teaches mainly in the areas of international politics and international law. Her primary research interests deal with transatlantic relations and international security. She works on issues of traditional security and human security within the contextual dynamics of “Europe” and the United States. She is currently working on a book titled The Evolving West: Traditional and Non-traditional Security Issues in Europe and the United States (1991–2008). Her most recent articles include “Split or Cooperation? Contending Arguments on the Future of the Transatlantic Relations (1991–2001).” Before joining the academic world, Dr. Simoni worked for the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) in Albania, and Bosnia-Herzegovina, and she has been a consultant for the Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs in the Bureau for Political Affairs. Dr. Simoni received her Ph.D. in 2008 from the University of Southern California, her M.A. from CSULB and her B.A. from the Università degli Studi di Roma, La Sapienza.

ADRIAN TREACHER is a Lecturer in the Department of Politics and Contemporary European Studies, University of Sussex. Following six and a half years of postgraduate, doctoral and post-doctoral study at the University of Birmingham, Dr. Treacher has spent the last eleven years at the University of Sussex’s prestigious Sussex European Institute. In addition to researching European security and EU external relations, he has also focused on French foreign policy, publishing articles in International Peacekeeping and European Security among others. He is also the author of French Interventionism: Europe’s Last Global Player? (Ashgate, 2003).

ANNA ZIELINSKA is a teaching assistant at the Department of International Relations at Collegium Civitas (Poland) and Junior Research Fellow at the Centre for Security Studies at Collegium Civitas. She is currently researching the EU’s Eastern Partnership. She received a Master’s degree in international relations, and her thesis title was Together and Apart: EU-US Relations at the Beginning of the Twenty First Century. She has participated in the European Union Institute for Security Studies (EUISS) 2009 Cambridge Summer School (UK) analyzing national security cultures. Project coordinator for Collegium Civitas in the EU's Seventh Framework Programme INEX: Converging and Conflicting Ethical Values in the Internal/External Security Continuum in Europe, and coordinator of a joint EEA project between Collegium Civitas and the International Peace Research Institute in Oslo (PRIO) The European Neighbourhood Policy-Background, Status, Outlook.