

Author Biographies

Editor

T. V. Paul is Director of the McGill University-Université de Montreal Centre for International Peace and Security Studies (CIPSS) and James McGill Professor of International Relations in the Department of Political Science at McGill University, Montreal, Canada, where he has been teaching since 1991. Paul is the author or editor of twelve books and more than forty scholarly articles and chapters. He is the author of the books Globalization and the National Security State (with Norrin Ripsman, Oxford, 2010); The Tradition of Non-use of Nuclear Weapons (Stanford, 2009); India in the World Order: Searching for Major Power Status (Cambridge, 2003, with Baldev Raj Nayar); Power versus Prudence: Why Nations Forgo Nuclear Weapons (McGill-Queen's, 2000); and Asymmetric Conflicts: War Initiation by Weaker Powers (Cambridge, 1994). Paul is the editor of The India-Pakistan Conflict: An Enduring Rivalry (Cambridge, 2005); and coeditor and contributor to four volumes, including Balance of Power: Theory and Practice in the 21st Century (with James Wirtz and Michel Fortmann, Stanford, 2004).

Contributors

Maya Chadda is a professor of political science at William Paterson University. She holds a Ph.D. from the New School of Social Research and is a research fellow at the Southern Asian Institute, Columbia University. Her publications include Paradox of Power: The United States Policy in Southwest Asia (Clio, 1986); Ethnicity, Security and Separatism in South Asia (Columbia, 1996); and Building Democracy in South Asia: Pakistan, Nepal and India (Lynne Rienner, 2000).

Sankaran Krishna is a professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Hawaii. His areas of work focus on ethnicity, nationalism, politics, political-economy, and international relations, especially as they pertain to South Asia. His books include Postcolonial Insecurities: India, Sri Lanka and the Question of Nationhood (Minnesota, 1999) and Globalization and Post-colonialism: Hegemony and Resistance in the Twenty-first Century (Rowman and Littlefield, 2008).

Matthew Lange has been an assistant professor of sociology at McGill University since 2004. His research explores the developmental legacies of British colonial rule and the causes of ethnic violence. His main works include Lineages of Despotism and Development: British Colonialism and State Power (Chicago, 2008) and States and Development: Historical Antecedents of Stagnation and Advance, edited with Dietrich Rueschemeyer (Palgrave/Macmillan, 2005).

David Malone is a Canadian diplomat and scholar. He is now the president of the International Development Center (IDRC) after being Canada's high commissioner in India. His books include Decision Making in the UN Security Council: The Case of Haiti (Oxford University Press, 1999); Greed and Grievance: Economic Agendas in Civil Wars, editor with Mats Berdal (Lynne Rienner, 2000); and The Law and Practice of the United Nations, with Simon Chesterman and Thomas M. Franck (Oxford, 2008).

Theodore McLaughlin is a doctoral candidate in political science at McGill University. His research interests include civil wars, ethnic conflict, intra-state security crises, civil-military relations, and regional security. His publications include an article in the journal Comparative Politics.

Benjamin Miller is a professor of international relations at the University of Haifa. Previously he taught at Duke University and the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is the author of When Opponents Cooperate: Great Power Conflict and Collaboration in World Politics (Michigan, 2002) and States, Nations, and the Great Powers: The Sources of Regional War and Peace (Cambridge, 2007).

Rohan Mukherjee is a senior research specialist at Innovations for Successful Societies, a research program at Princeton University. Previously, he worked as a research fellow at the Centre for Policy Research, New Delhi, and the National Knowledge Commission, an advisory body to the prime minister of India. His more recent work, on India-China relations, authored with David Malone of IDRC, appeared in Vol. 52 of Survival in February 2010.

Baldev Raj Nayar is a professor (emeritus) in the Department of Political Science at McGill University. His recent publications include India in the World Order: Searching for Major-Power Status (with T. V. Paul, Cambridge, 2003); The Geopolitics of Globalization: The Consequences for Development (Oxford, 2005); and The Myth of the Shrinking State (Oxford, 2009).

Mustapha Kamal Pasha is Sixth Century Chair and head of International Relations at the University of Aberdeen. He previously taught at the American University in Washington, D.C. His books include Colonial Political Economy (Oxford, 1998); Out From Underdevelopment Revisited: Changing Global Structures and the Remaking of the Third World (with James H. Mittelman; Macmillan, 1997); Protecting Human Security in a Post-9.11 World (co-editor, Palgrave, 2007); and International Relations and the New Inequality (co-editor, Blackwell, 2002).

Rasul Bakhsh Rais is a professor of political science, Department of Humanities and Social Sciences, at Lahore University of Management Sciences (LUMS). He is the author of Recovering the Frontier State: War, Ethnicity, and State in Afghanistan (Oxford, 2009); War Without Winners: Afghanistan's Uncertain Transition after the Cold War (Oxford, 1996); Indian Ocean and the Superpowers: Economic, Political and Strategic Perspectives (Croom Helm, 1986); and editor of State, Society and Democratic Change in Pakistan (Oxford, 1997).

Ali Riaz is professor and chair of the Department of Politics and Government at Illinois State University. His research interests include Islamist politics, South Asian politics, community development, and political economy of media. His publications include Faithful Education: Madrassahs in South Asia (Rutgers, 2008); Islamist Militancy in Bangladesh: A Complex Web (Routledge, 2008); and God Willing: The Politics of Islamism in Bangladesh (Rowman and Littlefield, 2004).

Robert I. Rotberg is the director of Program on Intrastate Conflict and Conflict Resolution, Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs at the Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University and president of the World Peace Foundation. He is the author and editor of numerous books and articles on U.S. foreign policy, Africa, Asia, and the Caribbean, most recently Battling Terrorism in the Horn of Africa (Brookings, 2005); When States Fail: Causes and Consequences (Brookings, 2004); and Corruption, Global Security, and World Order (Brookings, 2009).

Lawrence Ziring is a professor (emeritus) of political science at Western Michigan University. He was president of the American Institute of Pakistan Studies, and he has served on many occasions as a consultant for the U.S. Department of State on issues related to international security, and especially Pakistan. His works include Pakistan in the Twentieth Century: A Political History (Oxford, 2000); Pakistan: At the Crosscurrent of History (Oneworld, 2005); and Pakistan: The Enigma of Political Development (Dawson, 1980).