

ILLUSTRATIONS

Figures

- 3.1a Popular views on extent of inequality 44
- 3.1b Expected change in size of poor and rich 45
- 3.1c Attitudes about current income gaps 45
- 3.2a Attribution of why people in China are poor 48
- 3.2b Attribution of why people in China are rich 49
- 3.3 Attitudes toward egalitarian distribution and redistribution 51
- 3.4 Attitudes toward alleged benefits of markets, competition, and incentives 53
- 3.5 Attitudes toward the rich enjoying advantages 56
- 3.6 Attitudes toward urban bias 58
- 3.7 Perceptions of severity of inequality-related conflicts 60
- 3.8 Optimism and pessimism about social mobility and social justice 63
- 4.1 Comparative unfair inequality scores 75
- 4.2 Comparative stress on talent and effort 75

Tables

- 4.1a Views on extent of inequality 71
- 4.1b Expected changes 71
- 4.2a Why people in their country are poor 73
- 4.2b Why people in their country are rich 73
- 4.3 Attitudes toward egalitarian distribution and redistribution 77
- 4.4 Attitudes toward alleged benefits of markets, competition, and incentives 79
- 4.5 Attitudes toward the rich enjoying advantages 81
- 4.6 Optimism and pessimism about social mobility and social justice 83

4.7	How Chinese attitudes toward inequality compare with attitudes in other countries	86
6.1	Correlations among inequality perception measures	107
6.2	Correlations and regressions of perceptions of current inequality patterns	109
7.1	Correlations among equality and inequality measures	128
7.2	Correlations and regressions of attitudes favoring equality	130
7.3	Correlations and regressions of attitudes favoring inequality	133
8.1	Competing social class frameworks during the Cultural Revolution	144
8.2	Correlations among stratification and conflict measures	153
8.3	Correlations and regressions of opposing socialist stratification	155
8.4	Correlations and regressions of opposing market stratification	158
9.1	Correlations among opportunity and injustice measures	171
9.2	Correlations and regressions of lack of opportunity and feelings of injustice	172
C.1	Summary of critical attitudes about inequality	186