

Illustrations

- Map 1. Paris and its arrondissements (districts) xvi
- Map 2. Paris suburbs (selected communes) xvii
- Figure 1.1. The “old Paris” that the Prefect Haussmann gutted:
“The Rue des Trois-Canettes” (circa 1865). 11
- Figure 1.2. Destroying the old Paris (circa 1877). 12
- Figure 1.3. The Avenue de l’Opéra (circa 1890). 15
- Figure 1.4. The Grands Boulevards (circa 1880). 23
- Figure 1.5. Old Paris—untouched by Second Empire renovations
(circa 1900). 24
- Figure 1.6. On the edges of the vaunted “beau Paris”
(circa 1900). 33
- Figure 1.7. Representations of Parisian workingwomen (1896). 36
- Figure 1.8. The burned-out shell of the Hôtel de Ville (1871). 42
- Figure 2.1. The memory of the Belle Époque lives on. 45
- Figure 2.2. The capital suffered scattered damage in the First World War. 46
- Figure 2.3. Ecstatic throngs filled the Grands Boulevards to celebrate the end of the “Great War.” 47
- Figure 2.4. The unscathed conquerors in the most chic cafés on the Champs-Élysées. 72
- Figure 2.5. Jewish prisoners interned in the 1930s housing project of Drancy (1942). 73
- Figure 3.1. Paris’s international business district, La Défense. 89
- Figure 3.2. The Tour Albert. Paris’s first “skyscraper” apartment building. 91

- Figure 3.3. The thirteenth arrondissement—before modernization (circa 1900). 95
- Figure 3.4. Gentrification in the de-industrialized, massively redeveloped thirteenth arrondissement. 96
- Figure 3.5. Profiles of 1970s modernity: the Olympiades. 97
- Figure 4.1. Cyclists, strollers, and rollers enjoy the Rive droite expressway Sundays and holidays. 124
- Figure 4.2. Paris-Plage. 127
- Figure 4.3. The annual Fête des Vendanges de Montmartre. 130
- Figure 4.4. A semblance of convivial community lives on—in the Jardin Villemin along the Canal Saint-Martin. 135
- Figure 4.5. Street demonstrations, a fundamental part of the capital's political life. 452
- Figure 4.6. Traces of embattled memory: the basilica Sacré-Coeur vs. the Paris Commune. 155
- Figure 5.1. Traffic-choked streets—even before the automobile era. 169
- Figure 5.2. Away from the celebrated “beau Paris,” disparate beautiful buildings abound. 175
- Figure 5.3. The Square du Vert Galant—surrounded by archetypical elements of Parisian beauty. 177
- Figure 5.4. The most prestigious classic vista of the City of Light: the Champs-Élysées (circa 1900). 179
- Figure 5.5. The Parc de Belleville. 181
- Figure 6.1. Commemorative plaques on Paris elementary schools recall the more than 11,000 Parisian children deported to death camps. 192
- Figure 6.2. The oldest chocolate candy shop (confiserie chocolatier) in Paris—À la Mère de Famille. 194
- Figure 6.3. A now-rare “village” of small villas in the shadow of high-rise apartment buildings. 205
- Figure 6.4. Soulful places in the contemporary city include some formerly industrial sites, such as the Canal Saint-Martin. 209