

Illustrations

Tables

1.1	Cases of administrative grassroots engagement in cities of East and Southeast Asia	5
1.2	Beijing neighborhood research sites	26
1.3	Taipei neighborhood research sites	27
2.1	Levels of urban administration and grassroots engagement in China and Taiwan	54
2.2	Scope of administrative institutions in Beijing and Taipei	57
2.3	Descriptive data on RC directors, RC members, and neighborhood wardens	60
2.4	Occupational backgrounds of RC directors, RC members, and neighborhood wardens	61
3.1	RC elections in Beijing, 2000–2006	76
3.2	The Communist Party at the neighborhood level in Beijing, 2000–2006	77
3.3	Neighborhood warden elections in Taipei, 1998–2010	80
5.1	Predicting evaluation of respondent's specific RC or NW: OLS regressions	141
5.2	Predicting usefulness of RC or NW system: Ordered probit regressions	143
5.3	Familiarity with neighborhood leaders	150
6.1	Participation in neighborhood activities, by type of activity	175

6.2	Predicting voluntary neighborhood participation: Logit regressions	181
6.3	Openness with block captain	193
7.1	Attitudes toward RC or NW, comparing participants and nonparticipants	209
7.2	Contacting the neighborhood organization for specific reasons	211
7.3	Types of dispute by resolution channel pursued in Beijing	222
A2.1	Research sites outside of Beijing and Taipei	295

Figures

2.1	Cases of administrative grassroots engagement in East and Southeast Asia, by role and internal democracy	33
3.1	Party affiliation of Taipei neighborhood wardens, 1985–2010	82
3.2	Voting in neighborhood warden elections, by education	88
3.3	Neighborhood organization's perceived effectiveness at representation	92
5.1	Satisfaction with specific neighborhood organization	136
5.2	Perceived usefulness of neighborhood system	137
5.3	Willingness to cooperate with RC	139
5.4	Perceived usefulness of RC or NW system, by income	145
5.5	Keep or abolish neighborhood warden system, by party ID	147
5.6	Familiarity with neighborhood leaders, by education	151
5.7	Frequency of contact with neighborhood leaders	152
5.8	Openness with neighborhood leaders	153
5.9	Contact with neighborhood leaders, by housing type	159
6.1	Participation in neighborhood social activities, by age group	177
6.2	Neighborhood participation: Venn diagrams	178
6.3	Frequency of contact with block captain	192