CONTRIBUTORS

Stephen F. Burgess is Professor, Department of International Security Studies, U.S. Air War College. His three books are South Africa's Weapons of Mass Destruction (with Helen Purkitt) (Indiana University Press, 2005), Smallholders and Political Voice in Zimbabwe (University Press of America, 1997), and The United Nations under Boutros Boutros-Ghali, 1992–1997 (Scarecrow Press, 2001). He has published numerous articles and book chapters on African and South Asian security issues. Dr. Burgess has been a faculty member at Vanderbilt University, the University of Zambia, the University of Zimbabwe, and Hofstra University.

John R. Dreyer is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology. He research includes the hegemonic use of force, environmental security, and the military history of neutrality. Besides work on hegemonic malcontents, he is currently researching how military intervention might occur within the context of environmental security. A separate research project is focused on the relationship between social networking and hegemony.

Shale Horowitz is Professor of Political Science at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. He is the author of From Ethnic Conflict to Stillborn Reform: The Former Soviet Union and Yugoslavia (Texas A&M University Press, 2005), and coeditor of four other books, including Identity and Change in East Asian Conflicts: The Cases of China, Taiwan, and the Koreas (Palgrave Macmillan,

x CONTRIBUTORS

2007). He is the author or coauthor of articles in Comparative Political Studies, Comparative Politics, Comparative Studies in Society and History, International Interactions, International Studies Quarterly, Journal of Peace Research, and other journals. His research focuses on ethnic and international conflict, economic policy making, and political institutions.

Jennifer D. Kibbe is Associate Professor of Government at Franklin & Marshall College. She has published articles on covert action and the militarization of intelligence in Intelligence and National Security and Foreign Affairs and has chapters in the edited volumes, Strategic Intelligence (Praeger Security International, 2007) and The Oxford Handbook of National Security Intelligence (Oxford University Press, 2010). Her research interests include covert action, congressional oversight of intelligence, foreign policy decision making, and the U.S.–Soviet conflict in the developing world during the Cold War.

Neal G. Jesse is Associate Professor of Political Science at Bowling Green State University. He has published in journals such as Electoral Studies, International Political Science Review, International Studies Quarterly, Political Psychology, New Hibernia Review/Iris Éireannach Nua, and Representation and contributed chapters to edited volumes, including: Elections in Australia, Ireland and Malta under the Single Transferable Vote (University of Michigan Press, 2000) and Ethnic Conflict and International Politics: Explaining Diffusion and Escalation (Palgrave Macmillan, 2004). His books include Identity and Institutions: Conflict Reduction in Divided Societies (SUNY, 2005) and Ethnic Conflict: A Systematic Approach to Cases of Conflict (CQ Press, 2011), both coauthored with Kristen P. Williams.

Nancy D. Lapp is Professor of Government at California State University, Sacramento. She is the author of Landing Votes: Representation and Land Reform in Latin America (Palgrave/Macmillan, 2004). Her research interests include the origins and effects of electoral institutions in Latin America, compulsory voting, and U.S.–Latin American relations.

Christopher Layne is Professor of International Affairs and Robert M. Gates Chair in National Security at the Bush School of Government and Public Service at Texas A&M University. He is author of The Peace of Illusions: American Grand Strategy from 1940 to the Present (Cornell University Press, 2006) and (with Bradley A. Thayer) American Empire: A Debate (Routledge, 2006). Layne's next book is After the Fall: International Politics, U.S. Grand Strategy, and the End of the Pax Americana (forthcoming, Yale University Press). He has published in such scholarly and policy journals as: International Security, International History Review, Security Studies, Journal of Strategic Studies, The National Interest, Foreign Policy, The Washington Quarterly, and Orbis.

Steven E. Lobell is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Utah. He is the author of The Challenge of Hegemony: Grand Strategy, Trade, and Domestic Politics (University of Michigan Press, 2003); Ethnic Conflict and International Politics: Explaining Diffusion and Escalation (Palgrave Macmillan, 2004) with Philip Mauceri; and Neoclassical Realism, the State, and Foreign Policy (Cambridge University Press, 2009) with Norrin M. Ripsman and Jeffrey W. Taliaferro. He has published journal articles in Security Studies, International Studies Quarterly, International Interactions, Review of International Studies, Political Science Quarterly, Journal of Strategic Studies, The International Relations of the Asia Pacific, International Politics, Comparative Strategy, Chinese Journal of International Politics, International Journal, and World Affairs.

Galia Press-Barnathan is a Senior Lecturer at the International Relations Department, Hebrew University at Jerusalem. Her publications include: Organizing the World: The United States and Regional Cooperation in Asia and Europe (Routledge, 2003) and The Political Economy of Transitions to Peace: A Comparative Perspective (Pittsburgh University Press, 2009). She has also published journal articles in International Studies Review, Cooperation and Conflict, Security Studies and the Journal of Peace Research.

Maria Sampanis teaches at California State University, Sacramento. She is the author of Preserving Power through Coalitions (Praeger, 2003). Her research interests include international political economy and U.S. foreign policy.

Srini Sitaraman is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science and Director of the Asian Studies Program at Clark University and a Research Associate with the Fairbank Center for East Asian Research. He has published several articles and monographs on international regimes and has written about South Asian security issues. His book, State Participation in International Treaty Regimes, was published in 2009 (Ashgate Publishing).

Alexander C. Tan is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Canterbury (Christchurch, New Zealand). He is also Associate Director of the New Zealand Contemporary China Research Centre (Wellington, New Zealand), Senior Fellow at the John G. Tower Center for Political Studies at Southern Methodist University (Dallas, Texas), and an Associate of the Election Study Center at National Cheng Chi University (Taipei, Taiwan). He is coeditor of Ashgate Publishing's book series on Paradigms from Asian Politics, associate editor of International Studies Perspectives, and editorial board member of several academic journals such as Electoral Studies, Political Science, and Open Political Science Journal. He has published numerous books and academic articles in the areas of comparative political parties and elections, comparative political economy, East Asian politics, and European politics.

Michael D. Tyburski is a doctoral candidate in political science at the University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee. In addition to ethnic conflict, Tyburski writes on political corruption and is the author of a forthcoming journal article on corruption in Mexico in International Studies Quarterly.

Kristen P. Williams is Professor of Political Science at Clark University. She has published journal articles, chapters in edited books, and several books. Her books include: Despite Nationalist Conflicts: Theory and Practice of Maintaining World Peace (Praeger, 2001); Identity and Institutions: Conflict Reduction in Divided Societies (SUNY, 2005) and Ethnic Conflict (CQ Press, 2011) (both coauthored with Neal G. Jesse); Women, the State and War: A Comparative Perspective on Citizenship and Nationalism (Lexington Books, 2007) and Women and War: Gender Identity and Activism in Times of Conflict (Kumarian Press, 2010) (both coauthored with Joyce P. Kaufman), and World Politics in a New Era, 5th edition (Oxford University Press, 2012) (coauthored with Steven L. Spiegel, Jennifer Taw, and Elizabeth Matthews).