

CONTRIBUTOR BIOGRAPHIES

Jerry Anthony is associate professor in the School of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Iowa and the director of the Housing Policy Program at the University of Iowa's Public Policy Center. He researches housing, land use, and international planning. His article "The Effect of Florida's Growth Management Act on Housing Affordability" was named one of the most influential papers published in the planning profession's flagship publication, Journal of the American Planning Association. He has received the "Excellence in Planning Education" award for teaching from the Iowa chapter of the American Planning Association.

Brian Bucks is an economist at the Federal Reserve Board where he works on the Board's Survey of Consumer Finances. His research focuses on household finances and financial decisions, including the measurement of household wealth and well-being. Bucks received his Ph.D. in economics from the University of Wisconsin–Madison in 2004.

Dov Cohen is professor of psychology at the University of Illinois, where he also has an appointment in the College of Law. He is coauthor of Culture of Honor and coeditor of The Handbook of Cultural Psychology and Culture and Social Behavior. He was previously on the faculty at the University of Waterloo.

Marianne B. Culhane is dean of Creighton University School of Law, where she has long taught commercial law and bankruptcy. She has served as the Robert Zinman Scholar in Residence at the American Bankruptcy Institute and as the Southeastern Bankruptcy Institute Distinguished Visitor at Georgia State Law School. She is a coauthor of When Worlds Collide: Bankruptcy and Its Impact on Domestic Relations and Family Law (2005, 3rd ed.) and BAPCPA: Evaluation of Using IRS Standards to Calculate a Debtor's Monthly Disposable Income (2007).

Jacob S. Hacker is the Stanley B. Resor Professor of Political Science at Yale University and a resident fellow at the Institution for Social and Policy Studies. He is the author of several books, including The Great Risk Shift: The New Economic Insecurity and the Decline of the American Dream (2008, rev. ed.), and with Paul Pierson, Winner-Take-All Politics: How Washington Made the Rich Richer—and Turned Its Back on the Middle Class (2010). He is an expert on economic security, the privatization of risk, and the politics of U.S. health and social policy.

Robert M. Lawless is professor of law and codirector of the Illinois Program on Law, Behavior, and Social Science at the University of Illinois where he specializes in bankruptcy, consumer credit, and business law. He is the author of numerous scholarly articles and the coauthor of Empirical Methods in Law. Lawless also administers and contributes to Credit Slips, a blog discussing bankruptcy and credit issues.

Kevin T. Leicht is professor and chair of the Department of Sociology and director of the Iowa Social Science Research Center at the University of Iowa. His research examines the relationship between globalization and economic development. His recent books include Post-Industrial Peasants: The Illusion of Middle Class Prosperity (2007, with Scott Fitzgerald), Handbook of Politics: State and Society in Global Perspective (2010, with J. Craig Jenkins), and Social Change: America and the World (2010, 6th ed., with Charles L. Harper).

Angela Littvin is assistant professor at the University of Texas School of Law. Her research and teaching interests include bankruptcy, consumer law, and commercial law. Her recent work includes research on credit card use among low-income women and the relationship between the consumer credit system and domestic violence.

Katherine Porter is professor of law at the University of California Irvine School of Law. In 2010–2011, she was the Robert Braucher Visiting Professor at Harvard Law School. She is an expert in consumer credit law and has testified several times before Congress. Her published research addresses mortgage servicing, financial education, and consumer bankruptcy.

Deborah Thorne is associate professor of sociology and Wagner Teaching Fellow at Ohio University. For the past decade, her research agenda has focused on economic inequality—specifically, consumer debt and consumer bankruptcy. She has authored articles on social mobility, stigma, gender, medical debt, reasons for elder debtors' bankruptcy, and financial well-being after bankruptcy.

Elizabeth Warren is the Leo Gottlieb Professor of Law at Harvard Law School. She recently served as an assistant to President Barack Obama and the special advisor to the Secretary of the Treasury on the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. From 2008 to 2010, Warren was the chair of the Congressional Oversight Panel for the Troubled Asset Relief Program. She is the author of more than one hundred scholarly articles and several books, including The Two-Income Trap (2004, with Amelia Tyagi Warren) and The Fragile Middle Class (2000, with Teresa A. Sullivan and Jay Lawrence Westbrook).