

Table of Contents

Introduction	I
1. Literature and the Invention of the Ghetto
Leopold Kompert, "The Peddler" (1849)	25
Alexandre Weill, "Braendel" (1860)	64
David Schornstein, "The Tithe" (1864)	94
Samuel Gordon, "Daughters of Shem: A Study in Sisters" (1898)	123
2. Historical Fiction and the Sephardic Experience
Grace Aguilar, "The Escape: A Tale of 1755" (1844)	185
Ludwig Philippson, "The Three Brothers" (1854)	210
David Schornstein, "The Marranos: A Spanish Chronicle" (1861)	248
3. Experiments in Jewish Realism
Eugénie Foa, "Rachel; or, The Inheritance" (1833)	293
Ben-Lévi, "The March 17th Decree" (1841)	303
Salomon Formstecher, "The Stolen Son: A Contemporary Tale" (1859)	312
Amy Levy, "Cohen of Trinity" (1889)	346
Israel Zangwill, "Anglicization" (1902)	356

4. Fictions of Religious Renewal
Ben Baruch, "The Preacher and the Bellows" (1844)	387
Ben-Lévi, "The Fish and the Breadcrumbs" (1846)	398
Sara Hirsch Guggenheim, "Aurelie Werner" (1863–64)	407
Israel Zangwill, "Transitional" (1899)	440
Sources	465
Suggestions for Further Reading	467