

Contributors

Amitav Acharya holds the UNESCO Chair in Transnational Challenges and Governance and Chair of the ASEAN Studies Center in the School of International Service at American University.

Jorge I. Domínguez is the Antonio Madero Professor for the Study of Mexico at Harvard University and a past president of the Latin American Studies Association. He is co-editor (with R. Fernández de Castro) of Contemporary U.S.-Latin American Relations (Routledge, 2010) and co-editor (with C. Lawson) of Mexico's Pivotal Democratic Election: Candidates, Voters, and the Presidential Campaign of 2000 (Stanford University Press, 2004).

Stephan Haggard is the Krause Distinguished Professor at the Graduate School of International Relations and Pacific Studies at the University of California, San Diego. In addition to work on regionalism in East Asia and Latin America, he is the author of Pathways from the Periphery: The Politics of Growth in the Newly Industrializing Countries (1990) and, with Robert Kaufman, The Political Economy of Democratic Transitions (1995) and Development, Democracy and Welfare States: Latin America, East Asia and Eastern Europe (2008).

C. Randall Henning is Professor in the School of International Service, American University and a Visiting Fellow at the Peterson Institute for International Economics.

Simon Hix is Professor of European and Comparative Politics in the Department of Government at the London School of Economics and Political Science. His main research interest is the design of democratic political institutions, in the European Union as well as elsewhere in the world. He has written eight books, including “What’s Wrong with the EU and How to Fix It” (Polity, 2008), more than 40 articles in peer-reviewed journals in political science, and numerous reports for public and private organizations.

Miles Kahler is Rohr Professor of Pacific International Relations and Distinguished Professor of Political Science in the School of International Relations and Pacific Studies (IR/PS) and the Department of Political Science, University of California, San Diego (UCSD). He was Founding Director of the Institute for International, Comparative, and Area Studies at UCSD. Recent publications include “Asia and the Reform of Global Governance” (Asian Economic Policy Review, December 2010) and Networked Politics (editor).

Judith G. Kelley is Associate Professor of Public Policy and Political Science at the Duke Sanford School of Public Policy. She is the author of Ethnic Politics in Europe: The Power of Norms and Incentives (Princeton, 2004) and Monitoring Democracy: When International Election Monitoring Works and Why It Often Fails (Princeton, 2012).

Andrew MacIntyre is Professor of Political Science and serves as College Dean and Director of the Research School of Asia & the Pacific at the Australian National University.

John Ravenhill is Head of the School of Politics and International Relations, Research School of Social Sciences, Australian National University.

Erik Voeten is the Peter F. Krogh Associate Professor of Geopolitics and Justice in World Affairs at the School of Foreign Service and the Department of Government. Voeten’s research on the United Nations, the European Union, the European Court of Human Rights, and broader issues of international law and cooperation has been published in journals such as the American Political Science Review, the American Journal of Political Science, International Organization, International Studies Quarterly, the Journal of Politics, and the Journal of Conflict Resolution.