

Contributors

Deborah Avant is the Sié Chéou-Kang Chair for International Security and Diplomacy and Director of the Sié Chéou-Kang Center for International Security and Diplomacy at the Josef Korbel School of International Studies, University of Denver. She studies civil-military relations, military change, and the politics of controlling violence.

Andrew J. Bacevich is Professor of History and International Relations at Boston University. His most recent book is Washington Rules: America's Path to Permanent War.

Stephen Biddle is Professor of Political and International Affairs in the Elliott School of International Affairs, George Washington University. He is also an Adjunct Senior Fellow for Defense Policy at the Council on Foreign Relations. He studies military strategy and the basis in social science research for current defense policies.

James Burk is a Professor of Sociology and Cornerstone Faculty Fellow in the College of Liberal Arts at Texas A&M University. He is a past editor of the journal Armed Forces & Society. He studies issues related to war and morality in democratic societies.

Christopher Dandeker is Professor of Military Sociology in the Department of War Studies, King's College London. He is Co-Director of the King's Centre for Military Health Research (KCMHR), an Academician of the Social Sciences of the UK, and a Fellow of King's College London.

Peter D. Feaver is a Professor of Political Science and Public Policy at Duke University and Director of the Triangle Institute for Security Studies and Duke Program on American Grand Strategy.

Ronald R. Krebs is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Minnesota and author of Fighting for Rights: Military Service and the Politics of Citizenship. He is currently studying public narratives and national security policy.

Gerhard Kümmel is Senior Researcher at the Bundeswehr Institute of Social Sciences (SOWI) and President of the Research Committee 01: Armed Forces & Conflict Resolution within the International Sociological Association. He is also a Lecturer in the Masters' Program in "Military Studies" at the University of Potsdam.

Joseph Soeters holds the chair of management and organization studies at the Netherlands Defense Academy. He is also a Professor of Organizational Sociology at Tilburg University. His work includes comparative studies of organizational and military culture, multinational military cooperation, and national styles in military operations.

Pascal Vennesson is Professor at the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies, Nanyang Technological University. He studies military power and grand strategy in world politics. He is finishing his new book, War in the Global Village: Transnational Challenges and the Struggle for Freedom of Action.