

CONTRIBUTORS

Amin Allal is a PhD candidate at the Institut d'Études Politiques d'Aix-en-Provence and a researcher at CHERPA. He is coeditor, with Thomas Pierret, of Devenir révolutionnaires, Au coeur des révoltes arabes (Armand Colin/Recherches, 2013) and the author of two articles on the Tunisian popular uprisings of 2011 in Politique Africaine (vols. 117 and 121) and, with Youssef El Chazli, "Figures du déclassement et passage au politique dans les situations révolutionnaires égyptienne et tunisienne," in Ivan Sainsaulieu and Muriel Surdez, eds., Sens politiques du travail (Armand Colin/Recherches, 2012).

Montserrat Emperador Badimon is lecturer of comparative politics at the Université Lumière-Lyon 2. She received her PhD in political science from the Institut d'Études Politiques d'Aix-en-Provence. Her dissertation deals with the collective action of the unemployed graduates in Morocco, its internal organization and public management.

Anne Marie Baylouny is associate professor of national security affairs at the Naval Postgraduate School, where she specializes in Middle East politics, social organizing, and Islamism. Her book Privatizing Welfare in the Middle East: Kin Mutual Aid Associations in Jordan and Lebanon (Indiana University Press, 2010) analyzes social and political organizing resulting from new economic policies. Her current research is on Hezbollah's constituencies and its media.

Joel Beinin is the Donald J. McLachlan Professor of History and professor of Middle East history at Stanford University. He is the author or coeditor of nine books, including Workers and Peasants in the Modern Middle East (Cambridge University Press, 2001) and The Struggle for Worker Rights in Egypt (Solidarity Center, 2010).

Laurent Bonnefoy is a CNRS researcher at the CERI-Sciences Po focusing on political dynamics in Yemen, Islamist movements, and politicization of Salafism. He previously held research positions at the CEFAS in San'a' and at the IFPO in the Levant. He is the author of Salafism in Yemen: Transnationalism and Religious Identity (Hurst/Columbia University Press, 2011) and coeditor, with Franck Mermier and Marine Poirier, of Yemen, Le tournant révolutionnaire (Karthala/CEFAS, 2012).

Marie Duboc is a postdoctoral researcher at the Middle East Institute, National University of Singapore. She received a PhD in sociology from the School of Advanced Social Science Studies (EHESS) in Paris. In 2010–11 she was a Besse scholar at the University of Oxford. Her recent publications include “Where Are the Men? Here Are the Women! Surveillance, Gender, and Strikes in Egyptian Textile Factories,” Journal of Middle East Women Studies and “La contestation sociale en Egypte depuis 2004: entre précarité et mobilisation locale,” Revue Tiers-Monde.

Zeynep Gülru Göker is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Political Science at the City University of New York Graduate Center. Her dissertation explores the concept of silence in democratic theory. Her research interests include democratic theory, feminist theory, language and power, and the links between gender, militarism, and democracy.

Jeanne Hersant is associate professor at the Universidad Andres Bello, Facultad de Ciencias Sociales, Escuela de Sociología in Viña del Mar, Chile. Her recent publications include “Souveraineté et gouvernementalité: la rivalité gréco-turque en Thrace occidentale,” Critique Internationale no. 45 (2009).

Reinoud Leenders is reader in international relations with a focus on Middle East studies in the Department of War Studies at King's College, London. He is the author of Spoils of Truce: Corruption and State-Building in Post-war Lebanon (Cornell University Press, 2012) and coeditor of Middle East Authoritarianisms: Governance, Contestation and Regime Resilience in Syria and Iran (Stanford University Press, 2012).

Pascal Menoret is assistant professor of Middle Eastern Studies at New York University, Abu Dhabi. He was previously a postdoctoral fellow at Princeton's Institute for the Transregional Study of the Middle East, North Africa, and Central Asia and at the Harvard Academy for International and Area Studies. He is currently completing Kingdom Adrift: Urban Spaces and Youth Rebellion in Saudi Arabia (Cambridge University Press, forthcoming) and is the author of The Saudi Enigma: A History (Zed Books, 2005) and L'Arabie, des routes de l'encens à l'ère du pétrole (Gallimard, 2010).

Marine Poirier is a PhD candidate and assistant lecturer in political science at the Institut d'Études Politiques d'Aix-en-Provence. Based on her fieldwork in Yemen from 2007 to 2011, she has published articles on political parties, mobilizations, and elections as well as the revolutionary process begun in 2011. She is the coeditor, with Laurent Bonnefoy and Franck Mermier, of Yémen, Le tournant révolutionnaire (Karthala/CEFAS, 2012).

Joe Stork is deputy director of Human Rights Watch's Middle East and North Africa division. Prior to joining HRW in 1996, he was editor of Middle East Report, a bimonthly (now quarterly) magazine published by the Middle East Research and Information Project (MERIP).

Frédéric Vairel is assistant professor in the School of Political Studies at the University of Ottawa. He has coedited, with Myriam Catusse, "Le Maroc de Mohammed VI: mobilisations et action publique," Politique africaine 120 (2010) and, with Florian Kohstall, Fabrique des élections (Le Caire, CEDEJ, 2011).