

ILLUSTRATIONS

Figures

I.1	The Fryds: Third generation of Atlanta fans	3
I.2	Atlanta fans celebrating, May 2011	5
1.1	Immigrants in Buenos Aires, 1900	17
2.1	Jews dominated the city's textile industry	44
2.2	Football became a central activity for Jewish Argentine children in Buenos Aires from at least the early 1920s	45
3.1	The inauguration of the River Plate stadium, 1917	51
3.2	Lifetime membership of Juan José Enrich, 1942	54
5.1	A sketch of the projected new stadium, 1946	103
6.1	León Kolbowski giving a speech to Atlanta fans	118
6.2	"Atlanta al frente," April 4, 1958	120
6.3	Kolbowski supporters celebrating his electoral victory	124
7.1	Graffiti on a neighborhood wall	151

Maps

1.1	Buenos Aires neighborhoods of Once and Villa Crespo	27
2.1	Villa Crespo: Corrientes Avenue as the axis of daily life	34

Tables

1.1	The Jewish population in Argentina, 1895–1965	18
1.2	Jewish agricultural settlements established by JCA in Argentina	23
3.1	Biggest stadiums in Buenos Aires in the early 1930s	61
4.1	Membership of leading football clubs, 1910–1940	72

4.2	Neighborhood football clubs	74
4.3	Atlanta's rankings, 1931–1943	84
5.1	Atlanta's rankings, 1944–1958	93
6.1	Atlanta club members and number of Jews on the Board of Directors, 1904–1969	113
6.2	Atlanta's rankings, 1959–1970	121
7.1	Atlanta's rankings, 1971–1985	135
7.2	Atlanta club members and number of Jews on the Board of Directors, 1970–1996	136