

Contributors

Larry Diamond is a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution and at the Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies, where he directs the Center for Democracy, Development, and the Rule of Law (CDDRL). At CDDRL, he is also one of the principal investigators in the programs on Arab Reform and Democracy and on Liberation Technology. He is also founding co-editor of the Journal of Democracy and a senior consultant to the International Forum for Democratic Studies of the National Endowment for Democracy. His latest book, The Spirit of Democracy: The Struggle to Build Free Societies Throughout the World (2008), explores the sources of global democratic progress and stress and the prospects for future democratic expansion.

Gi-Wook Shin is director of the Walter H. Shorenstein Asia-Pacific Research Center; the Tong Yang, Korea Foundation, and Korea Stanford Alumni Chair of Korean Studies; the founding director of the Korean Studies Program; a senior fellow of the Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies; and a professor of sociology, all at Stanford University. Shin is the author/editor of a dozen books and numerous articles. His recent books include Troubled Transition: North Korea's Politics, Economy and External Relations (2013); History Textbooks and the Wars in Asia: Divided Memories (2011); South Korean Social Movements: From Democracy to Civil Society (2011); and One Alliance, Two Lenses: U.S.-Korea Relations in a New Era (2010). Because of the wide popularity of his publications, many of them have been translated and distributed to Korean audiences. As a historical-comparative and political sociologist, his research has concentrated on social movements, nationalism, development, and international relations.

Chong-Min Park is dean of the College of Political Science and Economics and professor of public administration at Korea University. He currently directs the Asian Barometer Survey in South Korea. Park has published articles examining Asian values, social capital, institutional trust, and local governance.

Yun-han Chu is a distinguished research fellow of the Institute of Political Science at Academia Sinica and professor of political science at National Taiwan University. He also serves as the coordinator of the Asian Barometer Survey. Chu specializes in politics of greater China, East Asian political economy, international political economy, and democratization. Among his recent English publications are How East Asians View Democracy (2008) and The New Chinese Leadership: Challenges and Opportunities After the 16th Party Congress (2004).

Jiyeon Kim is a research fellow and the director of the Public Opinion Studies Center at the Asan Institute for Policy Studies. Her recent publications include “Political Judgments, Perceptions of Facts, and Partisan Effects” (Electoral Studies, 2010) and “Public Spending, Public Deficits, and Government Coalition” (Political Studies, 2010). She also co-edited the volume of The Choice of Korean Electorates: National Assembly Election 2012.

Shelley Rigger is the Brown Professor of East Asian Politics and chair of political science at Davidson College in Davidson, North Carolina. She is the author of two books on Taiwan’s domestic politics, Politics in Taiwan: Voting for Democracy (1999) and From Opposition to Power: Taiwan’s Democratic Progressive Party (2001). In 2011 she published Why Taiwan Matters: Small Island, Global Powerhouse, a book for general readers.

Minjeong Kim is associate professor of journalism and technical communication at Colorado State University. Minjeong studies communication law and policy and digital media. Her research has been published in scholarly journals such as Communication Law and Policy, Journal of the Copyright Society of the U.S.A., Journal of Computer-Mediated Communication, and Telecommunications Policy.

Han Woo Park is associate professor in the department of media and communication at Yeungnam University in South Korea. Formerly, he was director of the World Class University Webometrics Institute funded by the Korean government (2009–2011). Since 2007, he has served as co-editor of Journal of Contemporary Eastern Asia. He also sits on the editorial boards of Scientometrics, International Journal of Internet Science, Quality & Quantity, and CollNet Journal of Scientometrics and Information Management.

Chen-Dong Tso is associate professor in the department of political science at National Taiwan University, and also serves as senior adviser to the Asia Foundation, a non-government organization based in San Francisco. His research interests lie in the areas of East Asian regionalism, industrial policy, and Internet society. Tso has published a number of articles in local and international journals, including Journal of East Asian Studies, Issues & Studies, and Australian Journal of Public Administration.

Yoonkyung Lee is associate professor of sociology and Asian and Asian American studies at the State University of New York at Binghamton. She has been working on research areas of democracy, labor politics, political parties, social movements, and political economy of development. She is the author of Militants or Partisans: Labor Unions and Democratic Politics in Korea and Taiwan (2011), and her articles have appeared in Studies in Comparative International Development, Asian Survey, Critical Asian Studies, and Korea Observer.

Wan-wen Chu is a research fellow at the Research Center for Humanities and Social Sciences, Academia Sinica, and adjunct professor of economics at National Taiwan University. She has published studies on East Asian economic development, especially regarding industrial policy, and is the co-author of Beyond Late Development: Taiwan's Upgrading Policies (2003, with Alice Amsden). Other books include Engine of Economic Growth (2002) and Globalization and the Taiwan Economy (2003).

Sangho Moon is professor at the Graduate School of Governance and department of public administration at Sungkyunkwan University (SKKU). Before coming to SKKU, Moon taught at Tennessee State University. As a public economist, his research has concentrated on income inequality, health-care utilization, and economic well-being of disadvantaged populations. Moon's publications appear in Applied Economics, Economic Inquiry, and Health Policy.

Wan-I Lin is professor of social work at National Taiwan University. He is president of the Taiwan Association of Gerontology (TAG) and the New Frontier Foundation (the think tank of the Democratic Progressive Party). Since 2004, he has served as editor-in-chief of Taiwanese Social Work. He publishes widely on social work, social welfare, and welfare politics. His recent publications include Social Welfare (2010), The Handbook of Disaster Management and Social Work (2011), School Social Work Practice (2012), and Social Welfare in Taiwan: A Historical and Institutional Analysis (2012).

Katharine H. S. Moon is professor in the department of political science at Wellesley College. She has served in the Office of the Senior Coordinator for Women's Issues in the U.S. Department of State and as a trustee of Smith College. Moon is the author of Sex Among Allies: Military Prostitution in U.S.–Korea Relations (1997; Korean edition 2002) and other publications on the U.S.–Korea alliance and social movements in Korea and Asia (e.g., democratization, women's movements, migrant workers, human rights).

Richard Bush is a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution and director of its Center for Northeast Asian Policy Studies. His scholarly work focuses on China's relations with its neighbors. His most recent books are Perils of Proximity: China–Japan Security Relations and Uncharted Strait: The Future of China–Taiwan Relations. Prior to arriving at Brookings in 2002, he served for nineteen years in the government, in Congress, in the intelligence community, and as chairman and managing director of the American Institute in Taiwan.