

Contents

Acknowledgments xi

List of Abbreviations xiii

Introduction i

PART ONE

1. Prologue ii
2. Renga History 12
3. On the Tsukubashū 16
4. Post-Shinkokinshū Waka 19
5. Ancient and Middle-Period Renga 21
6. The Character of the Work of the Early Masters 23
7. The Style of Ineffable Depth (Yūgen) 27
8. Learning and the Study of Renga 36
9. The Role of Waka in Renga Training 40
10. On Hokku 42
11. Double Meaning in Poetry 45
12. The Manifold Configurations of Poetry 48
13. The Roots of Poetry in Temporality 51
14. Poetic Process as a Contemplation 53
15. The Wisdom of Nondiscrimination 56
16. Right Teaching and the Individual Poet 58
17. The Influence of Companions in the Way 60
18. Poetry and the Mundane Mind 62
19. The Issue of Fame as Index of Poetic Value 64

20.	Poetry Is an Existential Discipline	66
21.	Poetry Is a Self-Consuming Passion	68
22.	Worldly Glory Versus Reclusive Concentration	71
23.	Criticism Is a Function of One's Own Limitations	73
24.	Sitting with a Master	75
25.	Constant Practice Is Decisive	77
26.	Valorizing the Deviant or Obscure	79
27.	The Difficulty of Comprehending Superior Poetry	81
28.	The "Vulgar" Verse	83
29.	Plagiarism	86
30.	Excessive Straining After Effect	89
31.	Semantic Confusion	91
32.	Incomprehensibility	93
33.	The Close Link and the Distant Link	96
34.	On Hen-jo-dai-kyoku-ryū as the Structure of the Renga Link	102
35.	On Rikugi : The Six Types of Poetry	109
36.	Poetry Contests and Criticism	114
37.	Marks and Grade Points in Renga	116
38.	One's True Poetry Emerges in Old Age	118
39.	The State of Renga in Our Time	120

PART TWO

40.	About Hen-jo-dai-kyoku-ryū	137
41.	The Central Place of Grace (en) in the Poetic Process	140
42.	Verses on the Moon, Flowers, and Snow	143
43.	The Verse of Ineffable Remoteness (Yōon)	145
44.	Renga Rules and Buddhist Precepts: The Question of Morality and Freedom	148
45.	Poetry and Zen Meditation, the Cosmic Body, and the True Word	153
46.	The Link Between Maeku and Tsukeku	156
47.	The Nature and Goal of Criticism	159
48.	Selecting Friends of the Way	162
49.	The Close Link and the Distant Link	164

50.	On the Issue of the Ultimate Style	167
51.	Discipline in the Mind-Ground	171
52.	Orthodoxy and Plurality	173
53.	Reclusion	175
54.	The Impartiality of Divine Response	178
55.	Heredity, Social Status, and the Way	180
56.	The Mark of Temporality in Talent, Training, and Fame or Obscurity	182
57.	The Difficulty of Achieving the Way: The Transmission of Mind Is Beyond Language	185
58.	Mutually Supportive and Antagonistic Arts	188
59.	The Practice of Poetry in Our Time	190
	The State of Confusion in Modern Renga	190
	The Pedagogic Method Should Suit the Student's Capacity	192
	The Three Buddha-Bodies, the Three Truths, and Poetic Levels	195
60.	The Question of the True Buddha and the Ultimate Poem	197
61.	The Ten Virtues	200
62.	Epilogue	204
	Notes	209
	Appendix: Biographical Notes	337
	Bibliography	361
	Character List	371
	Index of First Lines	399
	Subject Index	402