
Contents

Preface	xī
Measurements and Conventions	xv
Maps	xvii
Introduction	1
Part One: Asserting Hegemony over the Homeland: Dynastic Objectives and the Creation of an Agrarian Order, 1644–1700	21
1 Manchuria's Place in the Early Imperial Project	23
2 The Agrarian Order in Late Seventeenth-Century Manchuria	43
3 The State in the Village	60
Part Two: Peasant and State in the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries	75
4 The State and Agrarian Property Relations	77
5 The Social Basis of the Transformation of Agrarian Manchuria	107
6 Wage Labor and Wage Relations in Qing Manchuria	145
Part Three: State, Trade, and Peasant Agriculture: Developments in the Manchurian Economy	173
7 Household Formation, Property Division, and Agricultural Change in the Peasant Economy	175

8	The Content and Growth of the Manchurian Trade, 1700–1860	211
9	State, Merchant, and the Organization of the Manchurian Trade	239
	Conclusion: Critiques and Alternative	277
	Appendix A: Population and Cultivated Area in Qing Manchuria	307
	Appendix B: Grain Yields in the Qing and Republican Eras	313
	Notes	319
	References and Sources	371
	Chinese Glossary	401
	Index	407