

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction
Literature, Violence, and Politics	3
Part I: Sophocles' Antigone or The Invention of Politics: We the City
Antigone and the Polis	33
The Most Modern of Tragedies: The Politics of Burial	46
Creon's Edict: The Barbarians at Home	54
Dying Democratically: Antigone's Ritual	68
Interlude
Modern Tempo—Democratic Overture, State Finale	87
Part II: D. A. F. de Sade's One Hundred and Twenty Days of Sodom or The Reinvention of Politics: We the People
Sade's Text and Sade's Times	105
The Libertine Alliance: No Ordinary Pact in Times of War	118
Necrophiliac Cannibals: Dismembering "Nonpeople," Membering "The People"	127
Domestic Consistency: Not Laws, but Order	137
Frame within the Frame: Riveting Voices and Gazes	148
Interlude
Modern Sovereignty: Perversion of Democracy?	161

Contents

Part III: Mario Vargas Llosa's The Feast of the Goat or Sovereign
Politics: We the Nation-State

Vargas Llosa's Appeal to History: Within and Beyond Latin America 185

Necropolitics I: From an "African Horde" to a Modern Country:
Trujillo's Body Politic and the Haitian Enemy 202

Necropolitics II: Rebonding the Nation: Trujillo's Body Natural and the Specularity of Enmity 225

Epilogue

The Force of Imagination 241

Notes 253

Index 323