

Contributors

TIMOTHY BROOK is Professor of Chinese History and Principal of St. John's College, a graduate college of the University of British Columbia. He is the author of five books, most recently Collaboration: Japanese Agents and Local Elites in Wartime China.

CHANG JUI-TE is Professor of History at Chinese Culture University and Adjunct Researcher at the Institute of Modern History, Academia Sinica, Taipei. He is the author of The Peking-Hankow Railroad and Economic Development in North China, 1905-1937 (1987), Railroads in Modern China: Political Aspects of Railroad Administration, 1876-1937 (1991), and Anatomy of the Nationalist Army, 1937-1945 (1993).

JOHN W. DOWER is the Ford International Professor of History at MIT; his interests lie in modern Japanese history and U.S.-Japan relations. He has broken new ground through his scholarly use of visual materials and other expressions of popular culture in reexamining Japanese and U.S.-Asian history. His numerous publications include War Without Mercy: Race and Power in the Pacific War, Empire and Aftermath, and Embracing Defeat: Japan in the Wake of World War II.

JU ZHIFEN was born in Shanghai and is a graduate of Beijing Normal University, Department of History. She is currently a researcher in the Institute of Modern History at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing.

KUBO TORU is a professor in the Faculty of Liberal Arts at Shinshu University in Japan. Professor Kubo's publications include A Hundred Years of the Chinese Economy, Chinese Cotton Industry and Management in the Interwar Period, and A Study on the Chongqing National Government, all written and published in Japanese.

DIANA LARY is a Professor of History at the University of British Columbia and a senior scholar at the Centre of Chinese Research, Institute of Asian Research. Professor Lary works on Republican China, internal migration in China, military history, and the impact of warfare on society. Her publications include Region and Nation:

The Kwangsi Clique in Republican Politics and Warlord Soldiers: Chinese Common Soldiers, 1911–1937, and with Stephen R. MacKinnon, Scars of War.

LU MINGHUI is a professor at the Inner Mongolia Academy of Social Sciences.

STEPHEN R. MACKINNON is Professor of History at Arizona State University. Recent works include Scars of War: Impact of War on Modern China (2001), edited with Diana Lary. A new book in press is titled Wuhan, 1938: War, Refugees, and the Making of Modern China (University of California Press), a narrative account of the ten months in 1938 when Wuhan was the de facto wartime capital. Previous works include Agnes Smedley: The Life and Times of an American Radical (1988), Power and Politics in Late Imperial China: Yuan Shikai in Beijing and Tianjin (1980), and China Reporting (1987).

PETER MERKER is an independent scholar based in China and Germany, who specializes in Jiangxi studies.

SHAO MINGHUANG is the director of the KMT's Committee of Culture and Mass Media in Taiwan.

TSUKASE SUSUMU is a professor at Nagano University in Japan. Tsukase's research interests include the socioeconomic change and history of northeast China.

EZRA F. VOGEL is the Henry Ford II Professor of the Social Sciences, Emeritus, at Harvard University. A sociologist who specializes in both China and Japan, he has served as director of the East Asian Research Center, succeeding John Fairbank; chairman of the Council for East Asian Studies; director of U.S.-Japan Program; director of the Fairbank Center and the Asia Center, of which he was the founding director. Among his works are Japan as Number One, One Step Ahead in China: China Under Reform, and The Four Little Dragons. He edited Living with China.

FREDERIC WAKEMAN, JR., was the Haas Professor of Asian Studies at the University of California, Berkeley. His research interests included Ming-Qing social order, civil society in the Nationalist period, and police, security, and secret service relations to the state. Professor Wakeman has authored numerous books, including Policing Shanghai, 1927–1937, Shanghai Badlands: Political Terrorism and Urban Crime in Wartime Shanghai, and Spymaster: Dai Li and the Chinese Secret Service.

WEI HONGYUN is a professor in the College of History at Nankai University in Tianjin, China, and author of numerous studies on the social and economic history of Chinese Communist border base areas.

ODORIC Y. K. WOU is Professor of History at Rutgers University. He is the author of Militarism in Modern China: The Career of Wu Pe'i-fu, 1916–39 and Mobilizing the Masses: Building Revolution in Henan. He is presently working on a book-length study of the peasant revolution in Shangcheng County, Henan.

XIE XUESHI, a professor of modern Chinese history, has published many papers and books about the Japanese invasion of China, including New Version of History of Puppet Manchuria (Manzhouguo) and The Commentary on Investigation Department of Manchurian (Manzhouguo) Railway.

ZHUANG JIANPING was born in 1939 in Jiangsu Province, graduated from the History Department of Nanjing University, and is currently a historian at the Institute of Modern History at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences in Beijing.